Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1908 edition. Excerpt: . . . By Carl Holliday, M. A. 406 pp. Cloth, 2. 50, postage, 20 cents. New York: The Neale Publishing Company. 1906. Professor Holliday's book establishes beyond question his contention that the South has produced a literature so distinctive in its fundamental conception and growth as to deserve separate attention. This History of Southern Literature is the first effort to give the connected story of the development of the literature of the South from its earliest days to the present time--a worthy undertaking worthily performed. Beginning with A True Relation of Virginia, written in 1607 by Captain John Smith, Professor Holliday reviews the work of nearly 150 distinctively Southern writers, including, of course, many of minor importance, but including in the list, also, such conspicuous names as Poe, Timrod, Harris, Hayne, Ryan, Lanier, Hopkinson Smith, Murfree, and Page, together with others that are well known, though less prominent. Professor Holliday's appreciations of the work of the writers whom he discusses are generally just, and his book as a whole is a useful contribution to American literary history. w. h. h. The Life Of Charles A. Dana. With portrait. By James Harrison Wilson. 545 pp. Cloth. 3. 00, net. New York: Harper and Brothers. 1907. As one of the four or five great journalists of this country, Charles A. Dana won a reputation that has made his name a household word. Many who have admired the genius of the famous editor of the New York Sun, however,...
