The Eidograph, which is represented in the accompanying engraving, (Fig. 85,) is a far superior instrument to the pantagraph, being more exact in its work, and not so limited as regards ratio of reduction. The point of support when the instrument is at work is a heavy weight shown at H, from the under side of which three or four projecting needle points fix the instrument firmly to the drawing paper. Springing from this weight is a short standard or fulcrum, attached to a sliding-box, K, in which slides the centre beam, C, and to any part of which it may be clamped by means of a clamping screw. At the ends of the central beam are two pulley wheels, JJ, the centre pins of which revolve in sockets at the ends of the beam. Two steel bands,...

Reviews

An incredibly amazing ebook with perfect and lucid answers. It is written in basic terms and never difficult to understand. It has been written in an exceptionally basic way and it is only right after I finished reading this ebook in which it in fact modified me, affected the way I really believe.

-- Beverly Hoppe

Extremely helpful for all class of individuals. Better than never, though I am quite late in starting reading this one. I realized this publication from my father and dad suggested this ebook to discover.
