And this equation is always true, of however small a magnitude we suppose x to be taken; and therefore it will also be true when x is =; o. But, when x is == o, all the terms in the equation that involve x will be equal to o likewise. and consequently the equation will beE =--F----E-f-2E. Therefore (adding--E to both sides) we shall have E +--E =--F+ 2E, ftt tn tn and (subtracting E from both sides) we shall have--E = i-F + E, or--x m tn m E = E, Y-F; that is, --E will be equal to E together with--F either added to it or subtracted from it, as may be necessary to produce the said equality. But, because n is greater than tn, --E will be much greater than E; and diere. fore fore--F must be added to E in order to make...
